

Grassland Oregon

Blog

June 22, 2017

Livestock LOVE FIXation Balansa clover, and we've got the proof!

JAIL BREAK!

By Don Baune

After days of stretching the fence these cows finally broke out of their pasture and rapidly walked across an alfalfa field to get into a Fixation Balansa clover block. The Fixation was planted in the middle of the alfalfa field as an observation trial. The farmer in Ohio informed us that not once did the cows stop or put their head down to take a bite of alfalfa as they walked through on their way to the Fixation. The farmer had tried a few times to get the cows out of the Fixation plot but they would not move until they had their fill. Only after they were full of Fixation was the farmer finally able to get them back across the alfalfa and put them back into the newly repaired fence.

Livestock love Fixation for its outstanding palatability. It is an ideal forage because of its lush growth and high yields. With Fixation's high crude protein levels and relative feed value, you will see improved gains and healthier animals. This makes sense to add Fixation to your pasture mixes.